

PHOTO GALLERY

These are shots of Singapore. I've been talking about the place for so many years, I thought I'd show you a bit. Upper left, a few older colonial buildings in front of the banking district. Every high rise in the picture is a bank. Next to that is a shot of the port, where our clients are. Upper right is actually indoors, in City Hall Shopping Centre, one of the very modern centers in Singapore. It's actually quite spacey inside. Below is Suntec City—convention center—and surroundings.

Santa Cruz. Above, dinner with Judy DeLozier, Robert Dilts, Drew Dilts and his friend Chris (A's hat), Charlotte Milliner, Steve Gilligan and me. Above right, the beach and the wharf. To the right, a shot on campus, overlooking the ocean. Below, a shot of the beach, the boardwalk and amusement park. It's a great beach town and a great place to visit.

All the shots on this page are of London (personally, my favorite city in the world. Above is Trafalgar Square. To the left of the statue is the National Gallery, one of the worlds great art museums. To the right of the statue is the St. Martin in the Fields Church, home of some of the finest concerts you can ever hear. Above right is the Tower (of London) Bridge, from a boat as we passed underneath. Below that is a view of The Strand, one of the major streets in London, complete with double-decker busses, red phone booths and more. Trafalgar Square is at the end of the street to the right. Below is a view from the new Tate Modern Art Museum. You can clearly see the Millennium Bridge, for walking—built for the new museum—going over the Thames. The church directly across the water is St. Paul's.

To the left, Cindi and I with our friend Joel Lee, from Singapore overlooking the Thames. Above that, a view of the famous Tower of London—the site of many well-known imprisonments and beheadings throughout history—taken from a boat on the Thames. Above that, just so you don't think all I do is sightseeing, my class on the POWER Process. Directly above, taken from the boat, is Cindi with one of the many London bridges behind her. That is, of course, Parliament and Big Ben just beyond the bridge.